Fair trade ruling

Livestock dealer pays $10,000 civil penalty

Joseph Howell, owner and operator of Orange Livestock Market, Inc., Orange, Va., has agreed to a $10,000 civil penalty and a cease and desist order, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said this week.

B.H. (Bill) Jones, head of USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration, said Howell agreed to the order to settle charges of having shortages in the firm's custodial account, writing bad checks to consignors, and using custodial account funds for his own purposes.

In agreeing to the order, Howell neither admitted nor denied the charges in an administrative complaint filed by USDA in January 1983, under authority of the Packers and Stockyards Act.

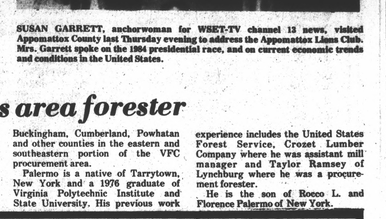
The charges involved livestock sold at markets which were then partially owned by Howell at Blackstone, Farmville and Orange.

The markets at Blackstone and Farmville are now under new ownership and management, and are not affected by the terms of this order.

Jones said all eligible claims for money owed for livestock have been paid by proceeds from Howell's bond.

Market agencies are required, under the P&S Act to properly maintain a custodial account to protect funds due to consignors from the sale of their livestock.

The P&S Act is an antitrust, fair trade practice and payment protection law. It is designed to maintain integrity in the marketing of livestock, poultry and meat, and in the marketplace.



SUSAN GARRETT, anchorwoman for WSET-TV channel 13 news, visited Appomattox County last Thursday evening to address the Appomattox Lions Club. Mrs. Garrett spoke on the 1984 presidential race, and on current economic trends and conditions in the United States.
